Preface

To God, Aliens, or Artificial Intelligence: Who Wrote the Torah Code?

I began my Torah Codes research in 1997 after reading Michael Drosnin's bestselling book The Bible Code. By the time I started writing this manuscript on December 30, 2024, I had amassed a vast collection of data, including thousands of Torah Code matrices, supporting the existence of a predictive Equidistant Letter Sequence (ELS) code in the Torah—the first five books of the Bible. Yet, after 28 years of research, the origin of the Code remained a mystery. When I began this new analysis, I considered three potential sources: God, extraterrestrials, or a military-grade artificial intelligence (AI) from the future. Such an AI would need the ability to transport data or people across time.

As a modern Orthodox Jew, I have a fairly strong understanding of traditional Jewish beliefs about the nature of God. While Christianity and Islam both trace their roots to Judaism, their concepts differ significantly. Christianity embraces a Trinitarian view of God, which Judaism, like Islam, rejects. In fact, the Quran considers this concept blasphemous. Specifically, Surah 4:171 states:

Believing in a Trinity (i.e., God being one of three) is a form of disbelief and blasphemy. It asserts that there is only one God, Allah, and that those who claim otherwise will face a painful punishment. The Quran also emphasizes that Jesus was a messenger of God, not God himself.

However, while the Quran recognizes Jesus as the Messiah born of a virgin, Judaism rejects Jesus entirely, along with the New Testament, Muhammad, and the Quran. According to Jewish belief, any messiah must prove his legitimacy by ending all wars permanently. He must also prevent people from worshipping any god not accepted by Judaism. The Jewish understanding of God aligns with the concept of the Holy Spirit; therefore, Judaism sees no need to distinguish between God and the Holy Spirit.

In recent years, speculation has grown about whether aliens played a role in shaping human history. The Raëlian religion, for example, claims that extraterrestrials—called the Elohim—created humanity using advanced technology. This atheistic belief system views the Elohim as the original creators, later mistaken for gods. Part of this stems from the Hebrew word Elohim—the second word in the Bible, which appears to be plural due to its "-im" ending. Other groups, like Heaven's Gate, also believed in godlike aliens and the possibility of being transported to the heavens via spacecraft. These are often referred to as UFO religions, and they assert both ancient and modern contact with extraterrestrial intelligence.

In this book, I will present compelling evidence of ancient and modern ET contact. By compelling, I mean a detailed account of my direct interaction with a man claiming to be an extraterrestrial. This individual, who goes by the name Craig Ebrahimi, came into possession of a 27-pound meteorite that appears to contain 16 fossilized alien embryos. The object has undergone various chemical tests and is being studied by several PhDs since Craig discovered it in 2018. My investigation of Craig is covered in Chapter 5, First Contact with an Extraterrestrial. To explain why I take him seriously, Chapter 6, Emails to and from an ET, presents 38 pages of email correspondence between Craig, scientists studying his meteorite, and myself, spanning more than a year. These chapters also outline why I believe Craig was the individual who delivered the precursors of COVID-19 to the Chinese military through the Center for Infectious Disease Control in Tianjin, China. Chapter 7 explores NASA's alleged misinformation about Martian weather, while Chapter 8 details primitive life forms discovered on Mars.

When Drosnin published his first Bible Code book, he claimed that any story reported in The New York Times could be found encoded in the Torah. My findings support his claim. Decoding the Torah Code requires selecting the correct axis term—typically a transliteration of a person's full name, last name, or first initial and last name—usually seven to nine Hebrew letters in length. The axis term may also represent events like atomic holocaust, war, Islamic terrorism, or disasters. These terms are then linked to a priori keywords found in the open text or as ELS terms at equal skips of ± 1 or the axis term's skip. Most matrices cover fewer than 1,000 letters (rows $\times$ columns) within the Torah's 304,805 characters. A matrix is usually followed by a spreadsheet showing the odds against such a configuration occurring by chance.

This book places special focus on what the Code reveals about influential politicians. Chapter 11 covers the Obama–Biden years, and Chapter 12 addresses President Trump. The individuals behind both Trump impeachment efforts are mostly named within the Code. Kamala Harris is the subject of Chapter 13. In total, I include 111 matrices. Many of my regular readers come from military intelligence, particularly Fort Huachuca, Arizona. I have received threats for publishing this information. This book holds nothing back. While it highlights advanced military technology, it still considers the possible role of an imperfect Creator.

Initially, Chapter 1 explained the mathematical process of breaking the Code. But since most readers aren't fond of math, I moved this material to the back of the book as Annex A. Now, Chapter 1 opens with an exploration of a possible Jewish–ET connection and the early role of the Nephilim—likely reptilian beings. Chapter 2 presents evidence that reptilian aliens may control the Vatican. The book goes on to name possible reptilians within the U.S. Government, discuss NASA's lies about Mars, explore my primary alien contact, share over a year's worth of emails with him, and provide an in-depth Code-based analysis of those involved in attempts to bring down Trump. I also examine extraterrestrial influence on Israel's enemies and identify those who were assassinated as indicated in the Code. The Epilogue ties it all together and proposes who may have authored the Code.

To use the Torah Code, you must purchase CodeFinder software (CF) from <http://www.biblecodesoftware.org/> for $47.95. I have no financial connection to it or its Australian developer, Kevin Acres. While other Bible Code software exists, none is as comprehensive or fast as CF. In 1997, it took me six months to find 41 code hits for “Ark of the Covenant.” In a single computer pass over the 304,805 letters of the unwrapped Torah (Genesis 1:1 to Deuteronomy 34:12), there were six open-text and seven encoded hits. Wrapped searches produced an additional 28 hits. Today, I can locate them all in a second. With this tool, I offer the world its hidden history.
